DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this

Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Kenney (US 4,939,567).

Kenney discloses the limitations of:

A first conductor (120, fig. 2) formed at least partially through said first wafer;

A first conductor insulating layer (110, fig. 2) formed at least partially through said first wafer, said first conductor insulating layer engaging said first conductor and disposed between said first conductor and material of said first wafer, said first conductor insulating layer being formed of dielectric material; and

A first outer insulating layer (78, fig. 2) formed at least partially through said first wafer and spaced from said first conductor insulating layer, said first outer insulating layer being formed of dielectric material (col. 3, ln. 37 – col. 4, ln. 8).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 2-11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kenney in further view of Iida et al. (US 5,644,157) and Yamazaki et al. (US 6,515,334).

Kenney discloses the claimed invention except for the limitations disclosed below.

Watanabe discloses the limitations of;

A second outer insulating layer (T1, Fig. 25) formed at least partially through said first wafer (14, Fig. 25) and spaced from said first outer insulating layer (T2, Fig. 25);

Wherein said first conductor extends through said first wafer from said first side to said second side (col. 10, lns. 11-24).

Therefore one of ordinary skill in the art would combine the limitations of Kenney and Iida because you can isolate the device from other devices with the second trench and the extending the first conductor through the wafer allows for better control of potential in the conductor.

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to form a second conductor and another device like the one described above, since it has been held that mere duplication of essential working parts of a device involves only routine skill in the art. St. Regis Paper Co. v. Bemis Co., 193 USPQ 8.

Yamazaki discloses that to layer wafers and connect them to form a compact device (fig. 3(A); col. 5, lns. 15-45). Therefore one of ordinary skill in the art would stack two devices to connect them electrically. It is inherent that cutting a wafer along the axis of the device through the outer insulating layer that the sidewall will intersect and will be the periphery of the dice.
